About the Leopard That Forgot to Hide Its Tail

HUNTER, by J. A. Hunter,
Harper & Bros., New York.

Of the African leopard our author has this to say:

"A leopard's bushcraft is deficient in one notable respect. Although he may conceal his body perfectly in a mass of foliage, he often leaves his tail hanging down. I have shot a number of leopards that were waiting for me in ambush simply because they forgot to hide their tails."

This is a true story, the exciting biography of a Scottish farrar who quit poaching on his native heath and left home to become Africa's greatest wild animal hunter — but legally; he was a game warden in Kenya.

John Alexander Hunter was born in Shearington, Dumfries, Scotland, in 1887, but in 1904, at the age of 21, he went to British East Africa and for more than 15 years was a safari guide and adviser to millionaire sportsmen, European nobility, and Oriental potentates, finally joining the Kenya Game Department, which he still serves. It is a coincidence that the man's name describes his occupation; you'll quickly find on reading the book that it takes something more than coincidence or luck to see a man safely through the adventures which befell this one.

In the introductory note his boss, Capt. A. T. A. Ritchie, head game warden of Kenya, wrote cryptically of Hunter: "In any case I can pay no greater tribute to his prowess than is provided by the fact that he is still alive."

This is not a mere adventure yarn. It is a detailed story of white men and natives and their battle with the animals of the jungle; and the full description of the habits and nature of the animals themselves is the thing which packs the book with danger and suspense.

I learned, for instance, that Africa's most dreaded beast is not the lion but the buffalo. A wounded buffalo does a tall amount of thinking while appearing to run away up the trail. Beyond the first turn he steps aside and lays in ambush for the hunter. And if you are so unfortunate as to be hunting alone, eyes bent on the trail, the assassin kills you. But if you are skilled in the secrets of Africa, as J. A. Hunter is, you never go after a buffalo without at least one companion — one pair of eyes for the road, the other pair to search out the ambushed danger around the bend.

Are lions man-eaters? Once in a while, Hunter tells it this way in the book:

"There seems to be a tendency among lions in certain districts to become man-eaters — a peculiar hereditary trait that can not be explained. It is true that a man-eating lioness will train her cubs to be man-eaters. Young lions do not kill instinctively and will learn to hunt whatever game their mother shows them. But this tendency toward man-eating seems to crop up only every third or fourth generation."

And finally, in this fascinating book, I came upon the tragic chapter where Hunter mourns the death of Buff, the great leader of his pack of hunting dogs. Buff went down a hole after a savage warthog and the varmint ripped him open. It wasn't on the day's hunting schedule at all, for old Buff had been retired from field work. The dog just ran across his path and old Buff couldn't resist the fireman's impulse. Hunter wrote:

"I have never owned another dog like Buff, before or since. The rest of the hunt was poisoned for me because of the loss of this great animal. I hoped some of Buff's puppies would take after him, but none of them were fit to run in the same pack with their father. You get too fond of a dog. Not until after his death do you realize how much he meant to you. I sometimes wonder if the pleasure of owning a dog is worth the misery caused by his death."

There it is: This book about lions and leopards and elephants and buffalo, and the African jungle — but with room enough for a dog.

State Is Warned Forest Fires to Strike Soon

By WILLIAM W. HUGHES
LITTLE ROCK (UP) — One of the worst forest fire slugs in the history of Arkansas may strike within the next 10 days if the state does not get some rain, Forestry Chief Fred Lang warned today.

He said 167 fires already have burned over 1,634 acres of timberland during the month of June. Most of the damage has occurred during the past five days as the long drought in the state continues.

Lang said the month-long lack of rain has made the woods " tinder dry."

"If the drought continues, the state may be in for a siege of forest fires even worse than the one last fall when more than two per cent of the state's protected forest areas was destroyed," Lang said.

The forestry chief said the next 10 days would "tell the tale."

"If we don't have some good rains by then, you news-men will have yourselves a real story," Lang told United Press.

A forest fire disaster this year would be unusual in that they normally have run in nine-year cycles in the state. Lang pointed out that the most damaging years in recent history have been 1934, 1943 and 1952.

A total of 65 fires in the past five days have burned over 1,634 acres of timberland. Most of the damage has occurred in the Salem, Hardy and Harrison areas in North Arkansas. The Malvern area in South Arkansas also has been hard hit. On Saturday alone, four fires burned over 300 acres near Malvern.

Lang said a total of 32,405 acres have been damaged by fire since Jan. 1, a comparatively light year. He pointed out that there was a large amount of rain during the normally bad month of March.

There also were very few fires early this month, despite the drought.

"But they're building up fast," Lang said in commenting on the outbreaks of the past week.

Living Cost Edges Up Again

WASHINGTON (UP) — The cost of living edged upward another three-tenths of one per cent between mid-April and mid-May, the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) reported today.

This was the third straight month the BLS consumer price index registered a rise.

The bureau said all major living cost items showed slight increases, except for transportation which showed no change.

Hope Man Appeals Second Conviction

Texarkana — R. E. Smith, 22, of Hope, Monday afternoon in Arkansas court appealed his conviction as a second offender to a charge of driving while intoxicated.

Smith was fined $250 and sentenced to ten days in jail in addition to losing his driver's license for one year. He appealed and bond was set at $330.

Canasta and Samba Apparently in the U. S. to Stay . . . Russia Probably Introduced Them

B REIMAN MORIN
For Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (UP) — About four years ago, something called canasta reached these shores, probably by slipping down a ship's bowser in the dead of night.

Soon after came the two-headed cousin, samba, drooling.

Now, this nation has had vipers before, but they have always run their course and vanished in fairly short order. It has survived such innocent lunacies as the helmet, the bell-bottom pants, the sox, the maxixe, and gold fish swallowing contests.

But this canasta-samba business goes right on, and I am beginning to view with alarm.

They say bad money drives out good, and apparently that goes for games, too. Try and find a proper rubber of bridge these days. That plastic ash-tray comes in with the coffee and another dreary evening begins.

It has occurred to me that these two travesties of skill and intel-

Lawmakers Look to Ike to Break Tax Deadlock

By LYLE C. WILSON
WASHINGTON (UP) — Congressional leaders hope to await a new move by President Eisenhower to break the tax deadlock in the House of Representatives.

Mr. Eisenhower tried last week to persuade Chairman Daniel A. Reed of the House Ways and Means committee to permit a vote on the administration's proposal to extend the excess profits tax for six months from June 30.

The United Press was informed that the best offer the New York Republican made to Mr. Eisenhower was a compromise. Reed said he would agree to extend the excess profits tax to Oct. 1 provided the President would agree to a 10 per cent reduction of individual income taxes from that date onward.

Mr. Eisenhower checked Reed's proposal over to the Treasury Department, where Secretary George M. Humphrey turned thumbs down. Humphrey pointed out that instead of bringing more tax money into the federal bill, Reed's compromise would actually result in a net loss of about $350,000,000 in 1953 revenue.

There's no depression talk for us. We are going ahead for the future. Now that we've borrowed the money for expansion somebody has got to buy our power. We must get new industry to use it.

"Over in Mississippi the people permitted cities to bond themselves in order to promote new industry, and of the 80 bond issues which went to a municipal vote every one passed by 20 to 1. Here in Arkansas we didn't see fit to give that authorization; the constitutional amendment was defeated."

Mr. Moses spoke to a packed banquet room. Introduced in his party were:

Frank Cantrell, managing director of the Arkansas State Chamber of Commerce; James D. Holloway, membership director of the chamber; Earl W. McCormack, executive vice-president of the Peoples National Bank of Little Rock; and Arthur E. Emminger, executive director of the Arkansas Resources & Development Commission.

Sylvette Burke, president of Hope Kiwanis club, opened the meeting and introduced Dr. H. M. Brents, president of Hope Lions club; Fred Gresham, president of Hope Rotary club; and Miss Beryl Henry, representing Hope Business & Professional Women's club.

Cities Urged to Help Selves on Industrial Road

"Many are ready to die for their country — but how many are willing to live for it?" C. Hamilton Moses asked a southwest Arkansas audience in Hotel Barlow banquet room today noon.

The president of Arkansas Power & Light Co. headed a delegation which is touring the state in the interest of the Arkansas Plan for Community Self-Help, jointly sponsored by the State Chamber of Commerce-Economic Council and other state-wide groups.

Mr. Moses, introduced by Guy E. Basse of Hope, said:

"A thousand concerns today are looking for a location in a town such as Hope. They never heard of you. You never heard of them. We've got to make contact."

"There are probably a hundred potential contacts available among the people right here in this room. You've got to use them. Put your personal contacts to work — and plug your area's advantages. In your mail, and wherever you go."

"On all 12 factors for economic progress Arkansas has been shown to lead the whole 48 states. Benjamin Fairless, head of U. S. Steel, once said our Southwest territory is the greatest area for expansion of the next 50 years — and indeed in the postwar years Arkansas has actually made more industrial progress than any state."

"The electric power industry is a good index. Arkansas Power & Light Co. in 1949 sold 8 million dollars worth of electricity. In 1952 it sold 42 millions — and by 1955 we expect to sell 52 millions. And these records are being run up against a static population of around 2 million people — the same 2 million, but a busier 2 million as industry develops."

To Remove Youths From Juvenile Homes

ATLANTA (UP) — Gov. Francis Cherry said last night he intends to remove all children under the age of 12 from Arkansas juvenile reformatories.

"Anyone under 12 is too young to be confined in these schools," said Cherry who attended a meeting here of the Georgia Big Brothers Association, a group that helps juvenile delinquents.

Cherry said Arkansas needs "a lot of social legislation and the juvenile court system and training school program need to be brought up to date."

State Seeks Bids on Printing

LITTLE ROCK (UP) — Secretary of State C. G. Hall today advertised for bids for printing and stationery to supply the state for the next two years.

Hall said his action furnished the basis for a possible court test of a recent ruling by Atty. Gen. Tom Gentry that sections of the new Fiscal Code are invalid. Gentry ruled last week that the section of the law authorizing the state finance director to buy printing and supplies for the state violates the Constitution.

Since 1921, the secretary of state has awarded printing contracts subject to the approval of the governor, treasurer and auditor. The new Fiscal Code, sponsored by Gov. Francis Cherry, places the actual purchase powers in the finance director, but leaves the governor, auditor and treasurer as approving officials.

Gentry last week said this was unconstitutional. He based his opinion on an Arkansas Supreme Court ruling that the same officials could not award and approve the contracts. Since the finance director is the appointee of the governor the effect would be the same as if the governor were both awarding and approving the contract, Gentry said.

Light Jobs Only Activity Along Front

By MILO FARNETI

SEOUL (UP) — Communist troops jabbed lightly at Allied lines across Korea and patrols prowled through no man's land today. Both Allied and Communist armies appeared to be awaiting the outcome of targeted armistice negotiations.

Communist loudspeakers on the Central Front again blared their prediction that an armistice will be signed Thursday — third anniversary of the war. The Reds had predicted a truce on June 23 for days before an armistice was jeopardized by South Korea's release of more than 27,000 anti-Communist war prisoners.

The biggest Red probing attack Tuesday was in company strength, the Eighth Army reported. Overcast skies and rain grounded most Allied warplanes.

The Eighth Army said more than 10,000 Communists were killed last week, most of them in the bloody fighting on the Central Front. The total was the biggest since the battles for White Horse Mountain and Triangle Hill last October.

Allied casualties for the week were not disclosed, but the U.N. losses presumably were heavy in the battles along the East-Central front.

Mother Questions Way Son Died

TEXARKANA (AP) — Army authorities are going to investigate an Arkansas highway fatality because of a mother's insistence that her soldier-son's death was "not just an accident."

Authorities at Red River Arsenal near here announced yesterday the immediate opening of an investigation of the death of Pfc. Frank Thomas. Thomas was found dead in his wrecked car in June, 1952, near Locksburg, Ark.

Thomas was attributed to a broken neck.

The mother, Mrs. Mary E. Thomas, former Texarkana resident who now lives in San Antonio, Tex., said she urged Army authorities to re-open the case because of what she called its "puzzling" aspects.

She said they were:

- 1 — A luggage case her son carried from Camp Chaffee was missing from the wrecked car.
- 2 — The discovery of part of his wallet 10 months later in a pasture miles away from the accident scene.

Christie Is Blamed for 2 More Slayings

By ROBERT BRANSON

LONDON (UP) — John R. Christie's lawyer plied two more murders on him today by disclosing the mild-mannered clerk slowly had strangled two women while making love to them.

Derek Curtis Bennett, famed British attorney who defended atom traitor Klaus Fuchs, also linked his spindly client to the 1949 murder of a woman whose husband was hanged for her death.

Curtis Bennett stunned a packed courtroom at the old Bailey during the second day of Christie's trial for the murder of his wife by disclosing details of two 1943 murders.

He read a statement in which the 55-year-old Christie said he strangled British factory worker Anna Eady while "I had intercourse with her."

During the same year, Christie's statement said, he strangled a "very tall" Austrian girl after having been intimate with her and buried her in a leopard skin shroud.

51 Bushels Turned Into 702 Bales Hay

Monroe Kent of Palmos seeded 51 bushels of seed oats of an adapted variety in 12 acres of dry and dusty soil early last September.

Mr. Kent in early June harvested 702 bales of quality oat hay. Each bale weighed 60 pounds or more. The feed produced from the 12 acres weighed 42,120 pounds or more, that is, at least 3510 lbs quality oat hay per acre.

The hay is not the most valuable product of the 12 acres of oats seeded County Agent Oliver L. Adams in discussing the crop. Four head of mature and yearling cattle grazed the oats about half time during the period December through January and practically full time from February 1 through March 20. The soil was somewhat protected from erosion and the leaching of plant food all winter.

Prior to planting 300 pounds 20 per cent superphosphate and 100 pounds 60 per cent muriate of potash was drilled into each acre of the soil. A residue of plant food was thought to remain in the soil from the 1952 crop because of low summer rainfall. A top-dressing of 100 pounds nitrate of soda was applied to each acre of the oats in early March. More nitrogen would have been used had it been available.

Mr. Kent never plants oats closer than every third year in his rotation and prefers every fourth year. He believes a full seeding in early September on a well-prepared and properly fertilized seedbed is necessary. He believes it good feed insurance, too, when thinking of the current month long drought and the short feed crop produced during the summer of 1952.

All Around the Town

By The Star Staff

Motorists driving on the East side of downtown Hope will tell you the section of the city is literally covered with traffic checkers.

Those long black things across the roads which register every time a car goes over it, it's the Highway Department checking the flow of traffic on Highway 29 north with view to determining whether an underpass is warranted at the Mississippi Pacific crossing.

Local citizens know the underpass is needed but actual crossing of the tracks on Highway 29 will not likely be heavy due to the simple fact the Missouri Pacific keeps the crossing blocked at least fifty per cent of the time.

At least this way when reporter finds it that way when wanting to cross.

While on Highway 29 north, those Hope folks will rejoice with Howard county residents that the Highway Department is finally fixing the "hurdle bridge" between Nashville and Murfreesboro.

You know it's the one in a deep gully, on a curve and only room for one vehicle at a time.

Extremists in India May Revolt

NEW DELHI, India (UP) — The death in political captivity of opposition leader Syama Prasad Mookerjee aroused open fears in India's government today of violence from Mookerjee Hindu extremists Jan Sangh party.

Mookerjee, 32, died early today in Srinagar, capital of Kashmir, where he was jailed five weeks ago for defying a ban on his carrying the state salute of Hindu lands by the predominantly Moslem Kashmir state government.

Officials said a heart attack, following an attack of pleurisy, caused Mookerjee's death, and that he had been moved from jail to a nursing home as soon as he became ill.

Post Office Hours Change in Big Cities

WASHINGTON (UP) — Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield announced today that post office and mail collection hours will be extended in 28 major cities July 1.

Postal windows in main offices and branch stations generally will remain open an extra half hour until 6 p.m., a few may remain open another hour or two, a department spokesman said.

Collections at mailboxes will be completed by 11 p.m. instead of 8 p.m.

In most of the cities, later collection "will substantially advance mail deliveries," officials said.

Summerfield said the later hours will be extended to more cities as soon as practicable. A test operation for later service in Washington, D.C., speeded up delivery of 80,000 letters weekly by at least 24 hours, he said.

The 28 cities include: Los Angeles, Oakland and San Francisco, Calif.; Denver, Colo.; Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Milwaukee, Kansas City, Mo.; St. Louis, Portland, Ore.; Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston and Seattle.

Telephone Rate Hearing Is Recessed

LITTLE ROCK — The installment-type Southwestern Bell Telephone Company rate hearing before the Arkansas Public Service Commission was recessed late yesterday until July 14 after a 1-day session.

Yesterday's episode was devoted to cross examination by Bell of two witnesses who had testified for a group of ratepayers opposing increases Bell is seeking.

Bell is asking that a present rate of 2.5 million dollars a year be increased to 3.5 million dollars a year. It wants the Commission to fix for the future a "fair trade" of return to yield above the traditional 6 per cent of investment.

This additional request has been estimated moneywise at 1.5 million dollars, that would mean a total of 3.85 million dollars a year.

Last week S. Lloyd Nemyer, Chicago accountant, testified he thought Bell should receive a 3 million-dollar a year increase.

Nemyer is an associate of Arthur Anderson & Co., engaged by the Commission to make an independent investigation in connection with the Bell applications.

Attorneys for the protesting ratepayers said Nemyer's testimony caught them "by surprise" and they asked for more time to prepare his cross examination.

The cross examination had been scheduled for next Monday.

The Commission didn't allow the minimum 30-day delay asked, but

COOKE PLACED ON MOST WANTED LIST

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Raleigh Cooke, 29, who figured in a crime spree in Massachusetts last September, was added today to the FBI's list of "10 most wanted fugitives."

The bureau said he is the only man remaining at large of a four-man group which, it declared, staged a series of armed robberies, kidnapping, and acts of terror in and around Lowell, Mass.

The outbreak involved the looting of a home, whose occupants were held hostage while the gang used the house as a base for operations during the night of Sept. 4.

Cooke's troubles with the police date back to age 14, when he was sent to a Massachusetts reformatory on charges of breaking and entering, larceny and malicious destruction of property.

He is described as a flagrant parole violator who is reported to have said he will never again be returned to jail. Hence, the FBI

One Missing as Freighter Sinks

PORT ARTHUR, Ont. (AP) — A Canadian freighter sank last night and one of her seamen was missing and presumed drowned after the ship collided in a heavy Lake Superior fog with another vessel.

The sunken ship was the Canada Steamship Line's 4,432-ton Scotiade, which went down with a cargo of 253,000 bushels of wheat, valued at more than $500,000.

She collided with the 4,959-ton Burlington, owned by the Paterson Steamship Lines.

The Scotiade's 29 crewmen abandoned ship, but one, Wallace MacDermid, 37, of Sault Ste. Marie, was reported missing.

Napal plans to have its first popular elections in 1954.

You don't have to think; in fact, it's better not to. Even at a crucial point, the ladies can go right on yattering about Jimmy's croup and the lovely dollies Louella got for $1.98.

So now try to picture a nation composed entirely of canasta and samba players. It would be soft, effeminate, fuzzy-headed, a push-over for the first tough customer that comes along. Do you think the Kremlin hasn't thought of that?

It is no coincidence, I believe, that canasta did not appear here until the Russians had run into some serious setbacks in the cold war. When we rared up and banged them with the Berlin airlift and beat their guerrilla on the Greek border, it became obvious that we weren't as soft as we looked.

That was the moment picked to ship over the red three's, wild jokers and deuces, the arguments about the closed-versus-open canasta, and the nonsensical business of drawing two and discarding one. Oh, they knew what they were doing, all right!

It had been reported, and accurately, that Dwight D. Eisenhower, who was then a five-star general, and his chief of staff in NATO, Gen. A. C. Greengard, are both hot bridge players. The plot could hardly be plainer.

If the Reds could get these two to forsake bridge for canasta, the Western defense alliance would never come into being, and in fact, the whole struggle would be over, then and there.

They have accused us of attempting germ warfare in China.

I think it is high time for the U. N. to go formally into the question: Who introduced canasta and

DOROTHY DIX

The Lady and the Date

Dear Miss Dix: Although I'm 28, everyone assures me I look five years younger. I have a fine job which involves my problem.

For two years I have been greatly attracted to a man who works in the same building, though not for the same firm. It was love at first sight as far as I was concerned, but unfortunately, Cupid didn't hit him, too. He speaks to me, but very casually. I know he isn't married, is a few years older than I am, and has a prosperous business. Foolishly, perhaps, I have written to him -- not love letters -- but received no reply. I have sent him Christmas and Easter cards, but received none in return. How can I get a date with this man?

ILLUSTRATION BY

Answer: You certainly don't give up easily, do you? For encouragement, I can tell you I've known happy marriages to follow even worse difficulties than you are experiencing, so there's still a chance for you. Can't you dig up some mutual friend or business acquaintance who would be sufficiently accommodating as to have a snail party, to give you ample opportunity to further your cause?

At the moment, the man certainly doesn't seem too interested, and your best course really would be to stop wasting your time on him and turn to greener pastures. However, if you are set on doing things the hard way, persist in your friendly, personal greetings, but do omit the cards and letters. No use being too obvious about the whole thing.

Since both his firm and yours are engaged in the same type of business, could you find an excuse to ask his opinion on some knotty problem? This isn't exactly a subtle approach, but at least it's less devastating than a bombardment of mail.

Dear Miss Dix: My boy friend has already said he loved me, though we have been going together only a month. I love him, too, but don't know whether to believe him or not. I'm 16 and he's 18.

BOBBIE M.

Answer: A month is scarcely time enough for love to be assured; the boy is probably sincere in his own judgment, which simply isn't mature enough to warrant your full trust. Why not continue the friendship, and wait for love to be more certain?

Dear Miss Dix: I have been going steady with my girl friend for six months. We are both 18. On her last report card, the marks were so low that her father will not let her see me for the next month. I have taken her out without her parents' permission. Don't you think we are right? O. L.

Answer: Your reasoning is altogether wrong. Since the young lady had her mind on you instead of her studies, something must be done to bring her back to earth. Her father's restrictions are perfectly in order, and if she expects to be accorded dating privileges again, she'll study hard to pass her conditional test. At 16 school work is more important than dating -- though it certainly is difficult to make young people realize it.

Dear Miss Dix: My wife is 16, and I'm a year older. She's giving me a lot of trouble by trying to stop me from seeing my mother and not letting me play hockey with the boys I have played with for years. If one of my family calls on the phone, she flies into a rage. I'm like a dog on a leash and getting tired of it.

Answer: You have acquired a wife who is still filled with the childish conception of possession. She simply refuses to share any of her belongings, and you are her prize property. Your marriage will not last unless drastic steps are taken at once. Your best course is to get your wife to a marriage counselor, who can, through personal interviews, unravel the tangle of your life, and set you both straight. In the meantime, stop giving in to your little venge and let her rage until she's convinced there'll be no more "giving in."
